

LET THEM KNOW YOU MOVED

Make sure the most important people and information will find you in your new home. And make arrangements to discontinue any unneeded services (e.g. electric, gas, water, etc.) on moving day to avoid additional charges.

- Family & Friends
Many of your close family members and friends may be helping you with your move. For the others, consider making a list and using social media or mailing a note or change of address card.
- Postal Service
After family and friends, arguably one of the most important places to advise of your move. To forward your mail on a specified date, simply fill out a Change of Address Form here or at your local post office.
- Physicians and Other Healthcare Providers
Make sure to update your new contact information for your primary care physician, dentist and any specialists you regularly see.
- Family Attorney
- Bank and Financial Institutions
- Utilities
Don't forget to have service disconnected on or just after moving day for electricity, gas, water, telephone, cable, internet, trash removal and other municipal services.
- Insurance Companies
Changes in your current residence can affect your homeowners policy and your life and health insurance agencies should also have your current address on file.
- The IRS
To ensure you receive your tax return, fiscal notes and other documents, print out and mail in the IRS' Change of Address form here.
- Subscription services and clubs
Includes magazines, newspapers and any other regular deliveries.
